When the Lord saw her, he was moved with pity for her and said to her, "Do not weep." He stepped forward and touched the coffin; at this the bearers halted, and he said, "Young man, I tell you, arise!" The dead man sat up and began to speak, and Jesus gave him to his mother. - Lk 7:13-15

Dear Parishioners,

Writing in the St. Joseph Cathedral Parish bulletin, pastor Father Paul Counce recently shared his summer reading list with his parishioners. Since I also enjoy reading and since there was not an urgent topic to write about this week, I thought I would do the same.

I read a good bit online these days and I also subscribe to several magazines and occasionally download books on my Kindle, but my preferred manner of reading remains the print version of novels and nonfiction works. I usually wait for the paperback edition but will sometimes splurge and purchase the hardback soon after it is released.

In the religious category, I am currently reading "Rebuilt" by Father Michael White and Tom Corcoran. Subtitled "The Story of a Catholic Parish," it is a book on Pastoral Ministry and Church Leadership which tells the story of how the authors revitalized the Church of the Nativity in Timonium, Maryland. Our Christian Formation Director Julie Cilano is also reading "Rebuilt" and it may make good reading for our parish staff and Parish Council members.

Next on my list in this same category is the small book "Strange Gods," subtitled "Unmasking the Idols in Everyday Life," by Elizabeth Scalia. Scalia writes a blog entitled "The Anchoress" and serves as the editor of the Catholic Portal at the Patheos website. This particular book falls under the heading of spirituality and takes its name from the first commandment — "I am the Lord your God: you shall not have strange gods before me." The sin of idolatry disguises itself in many forms so I look forward to reflecting on Scalia's insights.

I also enjoy reading history and just started "An Army at Dawn" by Rick Atkinson. It is the first of a three volume work on the liberation of Europe and looks at the war in North Africa from 1942-1943. The final volume of this trilogy was just released in hard cover but I decided to start with the first volume since it is available in paperback and was also awarded the Pulitzer Prize for History in 2003. I am only 112 pages into it but am very impressed so far.

Historical fiction can also be fun to read and I recently finished "1356" by Bernard Cornwell. Next on my list in this genre is "The Son" by Philipp Meyer. It is described by one reviewer as a "brilliant chronicle of Texas from 1849 to the present day," and covers six generations of the fictional McCullough family. I enjoyed "Lonesome Dove" and the novels which followed by Larry McMurtry so I look forward to reading this one.

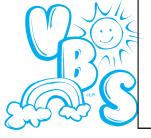

Of course summer reading should also provide a diversion from everyday concerns and nothing beats a good thriller. In this category I enjoy books by John Sandford, David Baldacci, Robert Crais, and Karin Slaughter. Hopefully you have your own favorite authors for broadening the mind and relaxing the spirit.

Please remember that we will take up a second collection next weekend, June 15-16, for the people who lost their homes during the recent tornadoes in Oklahoma. 10th Sunday in Ordinary Time

In the very difficult economic times of the last few years, many families found themselves relying on resources that they had never had to utilize in the past. Some households used their retirement savings or tried to sell their homes after a job loss. Others found themselves grateful for unemployment compensation even if it didn't pay all their bills. Some adult children found it necessary to move back in with their parents, while some families found help from a local food pantry or meal program-maybe one to which in better times they actually made donations.

In Sunday's Gospel, the widow from Nain has lost her only son. In the time of Jesus, this was not only a personal loss filled with grief, but also a devastating economic event. There was no one on whom she could rely for support. With her husband gone and now her only son dead, the woman had nothing. She was in the very worst of straits. That is, until Jesus came along. Suddenly, the widow had renewed hope, as her son was raised up and restored to her. Her life could go on.

The plight of our neighbors in need today is not so different from that of the widow of Nain. While we might want to have Jesus walk into town and give them their house or their job back, we know that isn't going to happen. But that doesn't mean that something can't happen. Indeed, something should! As the followers of Christ today, we are his presence in this world. When there are people suffering, we are the ones called upon to reach out and help. There might be one or the other among us who actually can offer someone a job, but most of us will help in other ways. It can be as simple as buying one extra item every time we go grocery shopping to donate to the local food pantry. We can all help!
